Sinopsis: A haunting and nightmarish tale that tells the story of Selah, a young girl born into a repressive cult known as the Flock. The members of the Flock – all women and female children– live in a rural compound, and are led by one man, known only as Shepherd. Selah, a daughter who is on the cusp of teenage-hood, is given the great honor of participating in the sacred ritual of the birthing of the lambs – upon which they depend for survival – where she has a shocking and otherworldly experience. She begins to have strange visions that make her question her own reality, and everything the Shepherd has taught her and her sisters.

Cast: Michiel Huisman, Raffey Cassidy, Denise Gough, Eve Connolly, Kelly Campbell, Isabelle Connolly, Charlotte Moore, Zara Devlin, Ailbhe Cowley, Irene Kelleher
Genre: Horror, Drama, Thriller
Production: Rumble Films, Subotica
Keyword: forest polygamy birth death religious cult

First of all, this is not a "horror" movie, more like a horrible movie. What can I say? There's nothing scary about it. Secondly, hasn't enough been said already about this female empowerment/emancipation etc. ? If there remains anything to be said, this movie certainly did not add anything new. The pace was slow and the whole thing was kind of predictable from the get go. It succeeds in creating a certain atmosphere that reminded me of The Witch, which in my opinion also dealt with issues of femininity, but at least was SCARY. I give it a 5 for perfectly ambivalent.

Sinopsis: A rebellious teenage boy, struggling with his parent's imminent divorce, encounters a terrifying evil after his next-door neighbor becomes possessed by an ancient witch that feasts on children.
Cast: John-Paul Howard, Piper Curda, Jamison Jones, Azie Tesfai, Kevin Bigley, Gabriela Quezada Bloomgarden, Amy Waller, Tug Coker
Genre: Horror
Production:
Keyword: witch possession woods flesh eating occult ritual ancient evil

A teen moves in with his Dad to take a summer job, but begins to suspect there's something up with the neighbours.

As other reviewers have noted, this is well made and produced. Cinematography makes good use of light, the make-up (by Eric Porn?) and effects are stylish, and the experience up to about 40 mins is unsettling, with some well timed jump scares and a creeping fear that made the hair on my arms stand up. Music is elaborate, with plenty of minor keys ever present. The performances are pretty good too, although the bully-boy scenes don't help the story.

Overall, though, the experience was middling. There's a phase switch, when the plot self-consciously moves to Rear Window (that's why he's wearing a cast!) with a Body Snatchers vibe, and from there on the fear subsides as I realise everything's gonna be alright. The problem, I think, is the story - a basic quest to slay a monster and rescue the damsel in distress. I think there's a couple of shooting stars in a nod to Spielberg, and he would feel right at home in this world, where a disturbance in the surface of suburban life must be put right even as the uncomprehending adults frustrate the instincts of the insightful hero.

There is a strange attempt to enter reverse-domino mode, where a montage reveals a deception in the story telling, so we're forced to re-evaluate everything we've understood so far. But it's so rushed and feels like they're trying to wrench more significance from the story when it isn't there, especially with such simple characters. So, this has lots of resources, but can't get over the fact the premise doesn't have the depth of myth to keep our nightmares alive.

In the end, the pointless title sums this up in a way the creators didn't intend. Still watchable.

Sinopsis: Set against the badlands of colonial Australia where the English rule with a bloody fist and the Irish endure, Ned Kelly discovers he comes from a line of Irish rebels—an uncompromising army of cross dressing bandits immortalised for terrorising their oppressors back in Ireland. Nurtured by the notorious bushranger, Harry Power and fuelled by the unfair arrest of his mother, Kelly recruits a wild bunch of warriors to plot one of the most audacious attacks of anarchy and rebellion the country has ever seen.
Cast: George MacKay, Russell Crowe, Nicholas Hoult, Charlie Hunnam, Essie Davis, Earl Cave, Sean

Keenan, Thomasin McKenzie, Jacob Collins-Levy, Orlando Schwerdt
Genre: Drama, Crime
Production: Screen Australia, Daybreak Pictures, Film Victoria, Porchlight Films, Romulus Films, Film4 Productions
Keyword: based on novel or book biography 19th century australian bush bushranger

This really was awfully disappointing. I've read and enjoyed Peter Carey's book of the same name that supposedly the film was based on, but there's a lot in the film I don't recall from that book, nor did some of it align with my general understanding of the saga of Edward Kelly.

It seemed to have been laid on with a trowel, eschewing subtlety for heavy handed sensationalism. Many of the settings didn't look right for the hills of Beveridge through to the north eastern Victorian high country.. Maybe it's a story that would better suit say 6 x 1 hour episodes rather than trying to jam it into 2½ hours and failing. The young and adult Ned Kelly were not believably the same person.

I liked Essie Davis as Ellen Kelly, and Josephine Blazier as Kate Kelly was convincing. Thereafter the roles failed to convince, let down by the screenplay, the settings and the lack of alignment with the generally accepted understanding of what happened.

I left less than midway through because the movie was bad. The movie started and seemed good but then it never really established itself. This happened because the movie had way to many subplots and never really got a central story.
